HISTORIC AMERICAN BUILDINGS SURVEY
KENSINGTON PLANTATION, LANHAM RESIDENCE

LOCATION: U.S. Route 601, Eastover vicinity, Richland County, South Carolina.

ARCHITECTURAL INFORMATION:

Description: Built by the Lanhams after 1941, this small brick one-story residence was constructed near the junction of the oval drive and the avenue to the highway. It has a gable roof and is reminiscent of a suburban ranch-style house with an attached garage. The brick is presently painted. Windows are louvered glazing in metal frames. The iron railing around the front porch was taken from the interior balcony of the Kensington House. The house is slated for demolition.

PROJECT INFORMATION:

This report was prepared for the Union Camp Corporation, owner of the property, as a requirement of the Memorandum of Agreement with the Army Corps of Engineers, dated March 1982. The writers were Preservation/Urban Design/Incorporated, and the information was based on previous research conducted by Triad Architectural Associates.
